

RENEWED VISION CREATES LASTING PARTNERSHIP WITH REDEYE COFFEE

When Creation's Care closed in 2015, owner and professional pet sitter Virginia McMullen believed, at the time, that it would be permanent. With a new full time job, new house, new canine fur babies being added to the family, and husband David working the midnight shift, the likelihood of sustaining a business, even on a part time level, seemed slim. Little did she know that her career as a professional pet sitter was actually far from over.

2016 brought many changes to the McMullen household. Virginia quickly learned that the job she thought was full time, could in fact, be completed sufficiently within 25-32 hours. With no room for advancement, Virginia once again turned to the possibility of pet sitting, reopening Creation's Care Pet Sitting on a part time basis in June 2016. Though her initial intentions for reopening the business were purely financial in nature, Virginia soon came to realize that Creation's Care would, in fact, do much more than just supplement her family income

Throughout her working career, Virginia had always wanted to, but had never been able to, go on a mission trip. At first, this was primarily because when the volunteer instructors at the non-profit she worked for felt called to go, Virginia was needed to cover classes and keep the non-profit's daily operations going. Thinking she had an opportunity to finally do so in the fall of 2016, she and David attended a global outreach interest meeting, where she heard this statement (paraphrased): "It takes three types of people to make a mission trip successful: those that go on the trip, those who send (support financially), and those who stay behind, supporting in prayer and keeping the day to day tasks moving along at home."

That one statement radically changed Virginia's perception on her purpose, not only on the importance of having "stayed at home" in the past, but also regarding the purpose of her role as a professional pet sitter.

With this renewed insight, Creation's Care Pet Sitting, LLC has partnered with Redeye Coffee, donating 10% of all gross proceeds towards the humanitarian efforts that Redeye supports. Our goal is to donate $1,000 towards this cause by the December 31st of this year. #10Kannual2027
